RABBI'S COLUMN

Transforming Justice Into Compassion

In a world whose rudder lately feels loose often leaving us struggling to find direction, we human beings most often seek two directions: "judgment and attack" and "judgment and forgiveness." Yes, I meant to include the word "judgment" in both cases as in both internal (mental) and external (Life) decision-making, we humans lean on making assessments, judgments, that lead us to certain resulting/accurate conclusions. Or so we think. The real question is, with the rules for assessment/judgment often blurred by our humanity, how do we come to honest conclusions? How do we make the righteous choice to attack versus the righteous choice to forgive?

Our tradition and Jewish Law is clear: We must extend far more — even orders of magnitude more — compassion over justice (attack). Don't get me wrong — Judaism does not speak about turning the other cheek per se. One must protect oneself, that is a commandment, but we must not act vengefully or wantonly to cause damage to others . . . even and especially if we believe that they are doing wrong to us (the Rabbis are even more clear that without being directly or personally affected, we are forbidden from zealously pursuing another's wrong-doing; rebuke is one thing, ensuring punishment of another is something else altogether).

Throughout history, the Rabbis have been focused not so much on how to punish but rather on how to show maximum compassion to others. And it is clear in their writings that this is often in direct substitution to the fulfillment of pure justice. After all, compassion is only compassion if it is the result of sacrificing an accounted measure of justice. And for thousands of years our Sages have lived the understanding that a world without compassion could not stand. The act of granting compassion is a holy act with its own reward unto itself.

As we leave behind the month of Av, during which we recall and mourn many of the major tragedies of the Jewish People, we look to ways to make things right for ourselves and for those around us. Sephardi Jews do not wait to practice this mitzvah, beginning their Selichot on the very first day of the month of Elul. Perhaps if we all set aside an entire month (instead of several days) for both introspection and seeking to offer and receive compassion for errors, we might find the Yamim Noraim, the Days of Awe, an even more powerful and freeing season.

So, as your Rabbi, I challenge you to do that which is less human and more Godly: Give up your judgments that lead to punishments (for yourself and others) and

This year Temple Beth Shalom is implementing tickets for the upcoming High Holidays. Tickets will be issued in August, along with the complete High Holiday schedule, to all paid-up members. It is important that dues be paid in a timely fashion so that this process will run smoothly. Tickets for guests of paid members will be $75 per person. Tickets for non-members will be $275 per person. Break-the-Fast will cost $25 per person. As per the incentive, there will be no charge for members who paid the 18 month dues.

No one will be admitted to High Holiday services without a ticket. Thank you for your cooperation. Any questions? Please call the office at 609-266-0403.

“Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom, must, like men undergo the fatigue of supporting it.”

Thomas Paine

To paraphrase ... Those who expect to reap the blessings of Temple Beth Shalom, must, like men and women, undergo the fatigue of supporting it with your time, your money and your spiritual support.

First – Please read the nomination list for the coming year. Note the vacancies!! We need more people to come forward now. Not next year or in the future – NOW!

Second – The general meeting is on August 22 at 10 a.m. Be there to cast your vote and to voice your opinions. Put up or shut up.

Third – Attendance is way down for our once a month Shabbat Services on Saturdays. If we are to continue these services, we must have a minyan. Surely, ten people can come once a month. I’m not asking you to come every month but you can make it every other month.

I would like to sincerely thank all who have supported me throughout the many years as president and to tell you that I really appreciated it. I hope you will continue your support for the coming administration.

Lill Shender
Immediate Past President

embrace those judgments that lead you speedily to greater and greater compassion (also for yourself and others). Our Sages were ever mindful of the fact that we human beings are flawed and so require God’s righteous, yet nearly infinite and lovingly compassionate, judgments to survive.

In this season of reflection, I ask for your compassion and please know that you have mine. Now, I ask you to offer the same to your fellow.

May we all find measure upon measure of compassion for each small dose of justice, and may we all know that even if our neighbor cannot find such holiness in their heart, God’s love remains to bind our faith and each of us, one to the other, even if when we cannot see it.

Person of the Month
Dr. Frank Kern

Frank Kern's medical school roommate did not return to Duke after the Christmas break. He had the graduate dormitory rooms all to himself until the middle of February, when suddenly there was a knock at the door. A new transfer student from Baltimore had been assigned to the room. A few days later Frank announced that he was going to have a birthday party and all the student nurses and medical students were invited. After the party, the new roommate apologized for not having gotten a gift. But Frank explained that this was totally OK as his real birthday was in July. The new roommate thought that this was a cool thing to have done and insisted on introducing Frank to his very cool sister, Sarah. The rest is history.

Sarah and Frank have two sons, David and Josh. David lives in Philly and has internet businesses and real estate ventures. Josh, who recently married, runs a charter school in Washington, DC. Sarah received her doctorate at Temple University. She is the Chair of the Department of Early Childhood Education at The College of New Jersey.

The Kern's have lived in Brigantine since 1980, and Frank has had a Dermatology practice here since 1989.
