RABBI'S COLUMN

Are We Only For Ourselves?

Words versus intentions? Last month I wrote to you about the limitations of words spoken or written for their own sake, about how we need more caring, more intention, in our lives. And so, now what – do we do nothing, simply walking around with good thoughts? I think we'd all agree that that's not enough. Good words are wonderful and good intentions are wonderful, but without deeds to back them up, our intentions are left inert and reality never changes. In the end, the grand expression of a holy life is not so much a question of what do I speak, or even what do I intend, but rather, what do we do. It is that approach that puts us and others in the world forward.

It has been widely reported that President Obama recently held a phone meeting with more than 1,000 Rabbis – an incredible first for Jews in the United States. He began that meeting with the Unetaneh Tokef prayer, so central to Rosh Hashanah, and spoke about communal responsibility. While I was already going to write my message to you about building a richer, spiritual life in the coming year, I could not allow this moment to pass without notice: As a student and teacher of Jewish history, the various lessons of this event are not lost on me.

The intersection between national and world events and our Jewish calendar this year is uncanny. The central theme of the Days of Awe is a resetting of the clock – the communal clock we call a calendar, the clock of our moral lives, the clock of our congregation, and most certainly the clock marking the shared moments of our communal lives. This theme is expressed in the constant framing of the prayers we recite and sing in the plural – what happens to us, happens to others, and what others experience, we experience as well. We cannot escape this reality during this time of year; it is central to how Jews and our heritage have always understood the Universe.

We read in the Unetaneh Tokef: On Rosh Hashanah it is inscribed, And on Yom Kippur it is sealed. How many shall pass away and how many shall be born, Who shall live and who shall die, Who shall reach the end of his days and who shall not . . . Who shall be at peace and who shall be pursued, Who shall be at rest and who shall be tormented, Who shall be exalted and who shall be brought low, Who shall become rich and who shall be impoverished. But it is through our actions, the prayer goes on to remind us, that we can lessen or negate God's decree: u'teshuvah, u'tefillah, u'tzedakah, ma'avirin et ro'ah hag'zeirah – Repentance, Prayer, and Good Works/Charity avert the severe decree.

The Days of Awe do not allow us to separate our fate from the fate of our fellow Jews, from our fellow human beings. Having been without health insurance, without needed medical care, and without the money needed to see medical professionals for periods of my life, I see the Unetaneh Tokef prayer in a similar light to how I understand the Aleinu – it is upon us to make the world better, to be God's actors in this realm, and to think as much or more about our fellow man than ourselves.

Let us take the words of the Unetaneh Tokef and make them our charge in the coming year. Let us vow to consider our own spiritual health, a central focus of which is certainly to be of service to ideals (and individuals) beyond the scope of our own narrow benefit. It is by following God's example in not forgetting a single

Presidents' Column

As we eagerly look forward to the New Year 5770, let's reflect a little on the last one. We had some huge success, some small success and some really less than successful events. We've had losses, both personal and to our congregation; we've had bar and bat mitzvahs, births, weddings, milestone birthdays and anniversaries, sickness and recovery. We had it all. As we enter into the "Days of Awe," let us give thanks for what we received and strive to better ourselves, our community and of course our Temple in the coming year.

I found this poem and want to share it with you.

Sure, this world is full of trouble
I ain't said it ain't
Lord, I've had enough and double
Reason for complaint;
Rain and storm have come to fret me,
Skies are often gray;
Thorns and brambles have beset me
On the road – but say,
Ain't it fine today?

What's the use of always weeping,
Making trouble last?
What's the use of always keeping
Thinking of the past?
Each must have his tribulation –
Water with his wine;
Life, it ain't no celebration,
Trouble? I've had mine –
But today is fine!

It's today that I am living,
Not a month ago.
Having; losing; taking; giving;
As time will it so.
Yesterday a cloud of sorrow
Fell across the way.
It may rain again tomorrow,
It may rain – but say,
Ain't it fine today?

Douglas Malloch, 1877-1938

soul on Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur that we can ensure we are on God's path as we follow our life's journey. If you need practical ideas on actualizing these values, please contact me; I will be happy to share them with you.

May we receive the blessing of God's redemption for this coming year and may we share that redemption with our neighbors. In doing so, may we all be blessed to share the precious gift of good health and happiness in the year to come.

JACKIE & FRED FABEL

were original members of Temple Beth Shalom and can relate all its activities when it started such as barbecues, car sale raffles and any way to make money for the Temple. They and their boys moved to Brigantine 35 years ago. Their son David had the first Bar Mitzvah here and brother Larry was married here. Jackie was chosen as the first Queen Esther of the JCC in 1976. She insists it was because she was the first Jew to take in foster children. She was active in our women's league and went on as a radio star and is still on board, reviewing entertainment in the Beachcomber.

What is Tashlich?

After synagogue, people generally have lunch with family and friends. Then it is traditional to go to a lake, river, or harbor for a ceremony called Tashlich, from the Hebrew for "send off" or "cast away." An informal and nonliturgical custom, people symbolically cast off their sins by emptying crumbs from their pockets into the water.

It's A Mitzvah! Food Drive

We at Temple Beth Shalom collected food for the food drive sponsored by the Jewish Federation of Atlantic County. Thank you to those who made enough donations to fill two very large containers for the JFS Food Pantry.

Visit the website of the Federation, to see photos of the 1,770 lbs. of food that was delivered to local food banks and organizations.

Bazaar

We made it! Oodles of people bought things at our flea market and made it one of our most successful moneymakers. This year, outside vendors added to our variety of items. As usual, shoppers waited outside our door anxiously waiting for us to open so they could spend their money! Due to illness, Edie Krimstock was unable to act as chairperson, so Lill and Ron Shender took over and did a great job! And a great big thank you to all of our Bazaar volunteers!
